- I. Claims 1-7, 11-14 and 16-23, drawn to the nucleic acid of SEQ ID NO:2, plants transformed with the nucleic acid, and methods of modifying and producing a plant secondary metabolite, classified in class 800, subclass 278, for example.
- II. Claims 8-10 and 15, drawn to microorganisms and methods of producing an enzyme, classified in class 435, subclass 71.1, for example.
- III. Claims 24-25, drawn to an N-methyl transferase of SEQ ID NO:1, classified in class 530, subclass 370, for example.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because:

In the instant case the different inventions have different modes of operation, different functions, and different effects. Invention I requires methods for plant transformation and regeneration not required by invention II, while invention II requires methods of bacterial transformation and culture, not required by invention I. Additionally, invention I requires method of assaying for secondary plant metabolites, not required by invention II.

Invention I is unrelated to invention III. In the instant case, the different inventions have different modes of operation and different functions. The first invention is distinct from the second invention because the former requires isolated DNA and methods for plant transformation and regeneration not required by the latter, while the latter requires isolated
